The man has an infatuation for this girl he has never met. Everything about her is perfect from the outside. Nothing could ever be wrong with her. She is a flower in the sea as she sails away from him. He will never see this young Goddess again.

He stands there in amazement, transfixed on her beauty. Her legs shine, and she is perfect. He doesn't know this woman deep down inside what she feels, likes, or acts. He doesn't care though, he just stands there transfixed with a bag dangling from his hand, as he watches this infatuation slowly leave and disappear from his life.
